Approve Study of New Fed. Highway Route

A new study has been authorized but with limited chances of success, for a change in the location of the proposed new federally-backed interstate highway. The new study may take six months. If successful, it would place the new super highway parallel to Routes 360 and 460, and thus cross Appomattox.

The federal government, with some state assistance, is to build a network of super highways over the nation. They will be ultra-modern expressways, justified as a national defense network.

Already approved by the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, is a route from Richmond west paralling Route 250 to Staunton and then south to Lexington and backtracking west to the West Virginia line. The new study is aimed at changing this route, and substituting the paralleling of 360 and 460, sending the interstate highway from Richmond to Farmville, to Appomattox, and on to Lynchburg and Roanoke.

Governor Almond has stated that he shouldn't express a preference at this time, but that "I would earnestly hope that the Highway Commission would give it serious study."

If eventually, the proposed new route were selected, it would in no way replace Route 460. It would be an entirely new highway, a modern super-expressway, parelleling in general Routes 360 and 460 from Richmond to Roanoke, and from there on 220 to Clifton Forge, where it wood join the Route 60 corridor.

Chambers of Commerce in Farmville, Lynchburg and Roanoke are joining hands to back the study of the route, hoping that they may win approval for location of the planned interstate highway in their areas. It would also be a boon to Appomattox, where the study will naturally be watched with interest.

However, towns and cities along the route already approved as suitable, are organizing to put up a fight for retention of the original Route 250 route, from Richmond to Charlottesville and Staunton.

Appomattox County Day To Be Repeated; Sunday May 18

It was announced today that a second "Appomattox County Day" will be held this year, on Sunday, May 18, at Old Appomattox Court House.

It will be remembered that well over 1,000 attended the Appomattox County Day last year on May 5, a project of the County Jamestown Festival Year Committee. With Mrs. F. F. Carr as chairman, and Dr. W. T. Williams as minister, a highly successful event resulted. It had later been suggested that the occasion be made an event item for Appomattox, featuring a religious service, on the theme of Peace as Appomattox's contribution to world history.

This year, the Appomattox County Day will be sponsored jointly by the newly formed Ministerial Association and the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The Rev. Richard A. Bergdoll, pastor of Memorial Methodist Church, will be the speaker at a 3:00 P. M. religious service, in which churches of the area are invited to participate.

Other events, including a band concert, are being planned for the day.

Oakville Area Hit By Storm

An area around Oakville was hit hard by a wind storm late Thursday afternoon. About 6:50, winds of almost tornado velocity uprooted trees, ripped off roofs and damaged crops in an area of about 3 miles around Oakville. One of the farms hit by the storm was that of Clarence P. Moore. Two large chicken brooders were destroyed and about 700 ten-day-old chicks were killed. Tin from the barn roof was ripped off, electric power cut off, and other lesser damage done.

The storm was brief, but left a trail of tree limbs and debris.

A. H. S. STUDENTS TAKE SCHOLARSHIP TEST

Sixty-eight students at the Appomattox High School took the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test, Kenneth Christopher, Principal, announced today. The test was administered at the high school at 9:00 A. M., Tuesday, April 29.

An estimated $5 million in Merit Scholarships and other awards are at stake in the national competition, now beginning its fourth year. Merit Scholarships are provided by some corporations, foundations, professional societies and individuals, as well as by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation itself, which conducts the competition.

The test has been constructed by Science Research Associates of Chicago, and will also be scored and reported by the testing agency.

Miss Frances Carson, a senior at A. H. S., reached the status of finalist in last year's competition. Even though winners of the 1957-58 competition have not been announced, Miss Carson has already been offered a full four year scholarship at Wilmington College, Wilmington, Ohio.

Mrs. Hubbard New President Garden Club

Mrs. R. C. Hubbard was installed as president of the Appomattox Garden Club Monday evening, when the club met in the County Library. Other officers installed for a two-year term were: Mrs. W. W. Burke, vice-president; Mrs. R. D. Robinson, secretary, and Miss Beulah Ferrell, treasurer.

Mrs. F. F. Carr, parliamentarian, installed the officers in a most impressive ceremony, after which the retiring president, Mrs. K. C. Gregory presented Mrs. Hubbard a Garden Club President's Pen, a gift from the club.

Mrs. Hubbard has served the Appomattox Garden Club in many capacities. She has been secretary, treasurer, flower show chairman, on many committees, and for the past two years has been vice-president, and program chairman. She is also active in church, the Woman's Club and Home Demonstration Club.

HAVE ENOUGH FISH IN YOUR POND?

"Do I have an adequate crop of young bass in my pond this year?" That is the question the wide-awake pond owner is thinking about these days. Soon he will be able to answer the question without guessing.

Usually, large-mouthed bass in our Virginia ponds have spawned and the eggs hatched by mid-April. If the pond is productive, it will have a good algae "bloom" and the young bass will not be easy to see. They are very small and remain in a group or "school" closely guarded by the male parents.

As the water warms up food increases and the little bass grow rapidly. By early June they are ready to leave the protected group. They go immediately into the shallow water around the pond margins. There is where they find their favorite food—small bluegills bream.

From early June until mid-July a pond owner can sample the shallow pond margins with a small minnow seine. If he has an adequate crop of young bass and uses the seine properly he can catch 1 to 20 or more little bass at a time almost anywhere along the shore. A good plan is to take five samples in the shallowest parts of the pond. Often the emergency spillway entrance is an excellent place to take one sample. If, in the five samples, you get as many as one young bass, you probably have an adequate crop for the current year. Often you will get five or more in the first sample. They will be thinned down as the summer progresses.

If the minnow seine samples fail to show young bass by June 15, it may mean that your fish population is not in proper balance to produce good fishing. To confirm this result, and to assist you to correct the imbalance, you may need the assistance of someone experienced in such management treatments. John C. Cole, Soil Conservation District Supervisor, can guide you to the proper source of help.

The Robert E. Lee Soil Conservation District has assisted 98 cooperators in stocking 108 ponds since 1942. These total about 162 acres of potential fishing water in Appomattox County. Even those which have too large a flow of water to be fertilized profitably can produce 100 pounds per acre of bass and bluegills with proper management. Some of the ponds are producing more than that amount.

If you are in doubt about how to manage your pond, see Ed Dickerson, local Soil Conservationist.

REMINDER TO FARMERS ON ACREAGE RESERVE RESPONSIBITY

Chairman Floyd Fleshman, of the Appomattox County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee today urged local farmers to be careful about their responsibilities under the Acreage Reserve of the Soil Bank during the coming crop season if they want to get the full benefit of that program.

In a planting season reminder to farmers, Mr. Fleshman pointed out that the signer of an Acreage Reserve Agreement has undertaken a binding commitment to hold his reserve tract out of production during the 1958 growing season.

"It will be too bad," the chairman said, "if a farmer goes into the Acreage Reserve conscientiously and means to comply, but fails to keep informed about requirements and deadlines and loses his payment through carelessness."

With regard to the Acreage Reserve tract (land on the farm diverted from allotment crops to the Reserve), Mr. Fleshman cited three main requirements as follows:

(1) Planting. No crop may be planted on the Acreage Reserve before January 1, 1959, except that with the approval of the State Committee certain crops may be planted in the fall of 1958 for harvest in 1959 or later, where that is the normal practice.

(2) Grazing. The Acreage Reserve may not be grazed before January 1, 1959, except under certain emergency conditions and with a reduction of the farmer's payment. Leasing of the land to others for grazing purposes is prohibited.

(3). Harvesting. No crop may be harvested from the Acreage Reserve during calendar year 1958.

In addition to observing these requirements on land placed in the Acreage Reserve, Mr. Fleshman said, the farmer must comply with any other acreage allotments on his farm and must keep within the farm's total permitted acreage. The permitted acreage is the Soil Bank base—the two-year average of grain and row-crops—less land placed in the Soil Bank.

By willfully failing to comply with his Acreage Reserve agreement, Mr. Fleshman said, a farmer will lose his payment, and may, under certain circumstances, be subject to a civil penalty equal to 50 per cent of the payment he would otherwise have earned.

Virginia's home demonstration club women are doing a little inventory these days. The occasion? The advent of National Home Demonstration Week May 4-10.

Almost 40,000 women in Virginia will join in the observance, which aims at further acquainting the public with the Agricultural Extension Service and its home demonstration program.

Home demonstration work is an educational program aimed at helping women become more effective homemakers and more effective citizens. Throughout Virginia, tours, achievement days, and demonstrations will be arranged by county home demonstration agents and local leaders as part of the national observance.

At VPI, Miss Maude E. Wallace, assistant director of the Extension Strvice, notes that organized home demonstration work is carried out in 94 counties and two cities in Virginia, and that 164 home demztrtion agents and assistants are employed to carry out the program. She estimates that in the state last year a total of 174,414 families were assisted in making home economic improvements, as compared to 108,146 families 10 years ago. All of the increase has come in rural non-farm and urban families, with farm families showing a drop.

Last year there were 38,612 members of home demonstration clubs, working in such fields as foods and nutrition, clothing, furnishings and equipment, home management, family economics, family life, health, safety, and arts and crafts. The selection, training, and use of local leaders, continued to be a major objective last year. A total of 19,202 local leaders helped with adult home demonstration work in 1957 —as compared to 11,236 a decade ago.

A total of 1,673 leader-training meetings were conducted, and the leaders trained in turn conducted 9,330 meetings for club members, with an estimated attendance of over 25,000.

Miss Wallace points to increasing urbanization as one of the most noteworthy trends in Virginia home demonstration work. Much has been done to meet the demands of urbanization, she says. With the rise in number of homemakers employed, there have been increased requests for night meetings and for information on management of money, time and energy.
